SYNOPSIS

Fiona Mullis bought a 1930s house in Kent. She could see it had bags of potential and remodelled it adding a major extension to the back enlarging and combining the existing kitchen and dining room. The whole space opens to a terrace with a water feature and mature garden. The kitchen was fitted with cabinets and a large island with door fronts in an acrylic finish, veneer side panels and granite worktops. As a keen cook Fiona was after convenience and wanted somewhere she could have all her ingredients to hand, a prep area plus a bank of ovens, microwave and plate warmer housed in one place.
