SYNOPSIS

An HR director of a company based in London, Gaynor Gillespie is married to Maitland Walker and lives in a 1900s 4-bedroom house on the outskirts of Glasgow. Her home is a mix of inherited pieces and more modern bought pieces. Gaynor is a keen recycler of furniture finding old peices and re-covering them in modern fabrics, or painting an old table or chair to fit in with her colour and style. Both are keen collectors of art. They have recently added an enormous, elegant kitchen extension with a wood burning stove in the join of the dining area and kitchen. very simple, elegant, unfussy people and style.
