SYNOPSIS

When Sarah and Darius Anderson purchased their Victorian Gothic farmhouse in Sonoma they embarked on major renovations to bring the aging beauty back to her former glory. Key to the home's sophisticated aesthetic are Sarah's knowledge and appreciation of exquisite pieces with unique charm and history, her knack for mixing them with less refined but ageless items, and the couple's love of nature. Rich textures, graceful lines, and homespun appeal define the interior's handcrafted and intriguing accents. Sarah excels at pairing stately pieces with country items and unpainted wood and raw textiles to offset the opulence of more refined furnishings.
